Paint flaw on the Frost Fairies

We get a lot of questions from collectors concerning the Frost Fairies ("Delicate Dance of Winter"). On some of the figurines the paint has come off or was cracked at the ankles of one of the fairies (and sometimes on both of them). This flaw is mostly seen when the fairies are not standing straight, but are being bent just a little.

Please be cautious when you buy this beautiful piece: check the piece and, when it has this flaw, ask your dealer if it can be repaired by Enesco.

Hair as black as ebony?

We also had a few questions about the color of the hair of the latest Holiday Princess Snow White. When this figurine is compared with earlier releases of Snow White, the hair looks more brown than black. This is certainly not a production flaw: Enesco has said that they wanted to create a more lifelike haircolor and therefore they used a brown tint.

Membership Gift sculpture 2006

It is being whispered that Ariel and her flying friend Scuttle will be the new Membership Gift sculpture for 2006.

This news has not yet been officially released, but we try to keep you informed as best and as soon as possible.

“To the Head of the Team, Zero”

The newest figurine of Jack Skellington on the Sleigh has been sold out completely. The limited edition of only 500 pieces was a great success.

The figurine was only available in the Disneyland Resort in Anaheim, California and the Walt Disney World Resort in Florida (both resorts had 250 sculptures available each).
